

ROSS PULLEN

Ross is 21 and lives in Redruth

I had a stable childhood which I would consider to be relatively normal. I did well at school and got good grades but I felt like I was pushed into college and university, even though I enjoyed the more practical subjects. I never really decided what I wanted to do with my career whilst I was in education. After school, I went to college but I was forced to leave before finishing due to ill health. I spent 18 months in and out of hospital and had major surgery early last year, but fortunately recovered in time to apply for the Fifteen course. I'm excited to be on the course, and a real weight off my shoulders to finally have a positive direction in my life and know what I want to do for a career.
